Key Stage 5

	Year	What is taught?	Why this? Why then?
		Overview of Topics
KS5	12 The Making of Modern Britain 1951-79	The Affluent Society, 1951–1964	In this unit students will receive a grounding in the workings of the British government. Students will look at reasons for the Conservative dominance of the period as well as evaluating the actions of the Prime Ministers, key cabinet members and other important individuals in government. Students will look at economic history, a complex topic that requires significant time to embed in the minds of students with concepts and key words aplenty. Interest rates, the balance of payments and stop-go policies are just a few of the aspects of this introduction to economic history.
			Students will also look at society, including an assessment of whether or not Macmillan was correct to claim that the British had 'never had it so good'. Themes such as the position of women, young people and migrants to Britain are investigated.
			Finally, students will look at British relations with the wider world, including the retreat from Empire, the nuclear bomb, attempts to join the newly formed EEC and the maintenance of the 'special relationship' with the USA.
		The Sixties, 1964– 1970	Within the political theme in 'The Sixties', we will look at the personality and impact of Harold Wilson, in addition to the inner-workings of the Labour Party in government. We will also look at the challenges posed by industrial action, the Northern Ireland troubles, and various other internal affairs.
			We will look at the transformation of British Society during this period and the role of Roy Jenkins, private member's bills, and the role of backbenchers in pushing through liberalising legislation. We will look at how immigration and the development of teenage subcultures affected Britain, as well as assessing the extent to which the status of women improved.
			With regards to foreign policy, we will evaluate the second attempt made by Britain to join the EEC, the strain put on the 'special relationship' by the Vietnam War and the continuation of decolonisation.
		The end of Post-War Consensus, 1970– 1979	As we move into the next decade, students will assess the continuing Northern Ireland troubles and the British government's attempt to deal with the myriad of complex issues. We will also look at industrial relations and in particular the miner's strikes. We will study Prime Minister Heath as a political leader and evaluate his decisions and policies.
			Within British Society we will consider the impact of political, economic and industrial problems, as well as feminism, the Sex Discrimination Act, Race and Immigration as well as environmentalism.
			With regards to foreign policy, we will look at Britain's entry into Europe, the fluctuating status of the 'special relationship' and British attitudes towards the communist sphere.

The Making of a Superpower: USA 1865-1920	The Era of Reconstruction and the Gilded Age, 1865–1890	Students begin the unit with a look at the function of US government, and this gives them a chance to compare it to what they study in the other half of the course with the British unit. Students look at a divided America and the attempts at reconstruction. In particular there is a focus on the plight of African Americans and the extent to which the 13 th , 14 th and 15 th Amendments actually altered their lives. In terms of foreign policy, students look at the influence of the Monroe Doctrine on US foreign policy and in particular the extent to which the USA could be consider an isolationist nation. Domestically we evaluate the idea that this was a Gilded Age full of political corruption and weak presidents. In the economic sphere we consider the reasons for the rise of corporations, railroads, oil and the general - but uneven - economic growth experienced at this time.
	Populism, progressivism and imperialism, 1890– 1920	A key focus of the Progressive Era is foreign policy, and we assess whether or not the USA moved away from isolationism and if their actions could feasibly be labelled as 'imperialism'. We look at the impact of Populism, the reasons for Populism and the influence of such political ideas on the development of Progressivism. Domestically we continue to look at the monumental rise of US industry as the country grew into becoming an economic world power. We again look at the extent to which reconstruction actually improved the lives of African Americans, but we also look at new aspects and issues such as nativism. As ever, there is a study of the Presidents and an evaluation of how effective their policies and actions were.
		Finally, we look at the impact of the outbreak of the First World War on the USA and the eventual reasons for the USA entering the war on the side of the Allies.

13 The Making of Modern	The impact of Thatcherism, 1979–1987	In political terms students will study the personality, policies and impact of Margaret Thatcher, the weaknesses and divisions within the Labour Party and the Northern Ireland troubles.
Britain 1979-2005		In the economic sphere, students look at the tumultuous changes that occurred under Thatcher including monetarism, privatisation and deregulation. Students will try to understand why Thatcher felt it necessary to make such radical changes and look at the strong reaction to the new-look economy.
		When studying British Society, students will look at the sale of council houses, industrial disputes, and issues such as the public response to the introduction of a poll tax.
		Students will also look at foreign affairs, the ever-changing status of the 'special relationship' with the USA and the ending of the Cold War. We will look at Thatcher as an international figure as well as attitudes towards Europe.
	Towards a new Consensus, 1987–1997	We begin with a look at the fall of Thatcher from power and the legacy that she left behind. We will look at economic developments, including 'Black Wednesday' and its impact. There is a focus on political sleaze, scandals and satire as well as a look at the divisions growing within the Conservative Party. We also look at the significant changes within Labour that would eventually contribute to an election victory in 1997.
		Social issues of this era range from the extent of 'social liberalism', the anti-establishment culture, the position of women and race relations.
		In foreign affairs, students will look at the relations with Europe including the impact of the Single European Act and the Maastricht Treaty. We will look at interventions in the Balkans, the Gulf War and attitudes towards the end of the Cold War.
	The Era of New Labour, 1997–2007	In their final unit, students look at the factors that came together to bring Labour to power in 1997 after almost two decades in opposition. We look at Blair's character, ideology, his policies and his relationship with other key figures in the Labour government.
		We look at the Conservative Party in opposition, their leaders and the reasons for the divisions within the party, in addition to the reasons for their failure to win the 2001 and 2005 elections.
		In terms of foreign policy, we look once more at the 'special relationship' but this time in the context of the 'war on terror'. We end by looking at Britain's position in the world by 2007.
		In British society we look at trends and changes through time, key turning points and the extent to which Britain had become and multicultural society by 1997.

The Making Superpowe 1975	g of a er: USA 1920-	Crisis of identity, 1920–1945	 We look in this unit at the emergence of the United States as an economic superpower that maintained isolation from Europe and the wider world in foreign policy. We look at the Republican dominance of the 1920s, including the impact of their policies on the US economy. We look at the reasons for the boom in the economy, as well as the long and short-term reasons for the Great Depression. In US society, students will look at the 'Jazz Age', the impact of Prohibition and the role of women in society. There will be a study of African Americans and other minorities, as well as the rise of the KKK. We evaluate the extent to which the United States remained a divided nation. Towards the end of this unit, we look in detail at the 1932 election and the reasons for the Democrat landslide victory. We look at the first Hundred Days of Roosevelt's time in office
		The Superpower, 1945–1975	By 1945 the United States emerged as the pre-eminent superpower in global politics and we look at how the United States adapted to this role, with particular focus on relations with the Soviet Union as the US abandoned isolationism and the Monroe Doctrine. Politically we look at a period in which both Democrats and Republicans took turns in holding office. We compare policies, actions and the elements of change and continuity from administration to administration. In American society we investigate the spectre of McCarthyism and how this atmosphere at home affected politics at home and abroad. We consider the extent to which the United States had become more united, or if deep divisions still existed. We evaluate the position of women, minorities and in particular the position of African Americans in US society in an era of Civil Rights activism and success.
		Non-Examined Unit (Coursework)	Towards the end of Year 12 until the Christmas holidays in Year 13, students will devise their own lines of enquiry on a topic of their choosing and will construct their non-examined piece of work. This constitutes 20% of their course. Their focus question must be set within a period of roughly 100 years. There must be no overlap with other parts of the course, and we make recommendations of topics to study but students are free to pursue their own areas of interest. Within their work, students must demonstrate mastery of all the key assessment objective key skills, from constructing an essay, to assessing sources of evidence and interpretations. Unlike the exams, students must research and select their own interpretations and sources that would be appropriate to their question before commencing with their evaluations.
